CLAY SONG... By J. G. FREEMAN. Tune-'Let a woman have her way.' Some people make a muss, and politics they curse And tell you, if you vote for Clay, 't will impoverish your purse: Such idle talk to mind

I 've never felt inclined : I've voted thrice for President, for better or for

Though some are always playing tricks and squandering the pelf, And seem to say, " I 'm only here to aggrandize myself:

Yet, mark me what I say, though justice we We 'll sweep such rulers from the path, and put in HARRY CLAY! My first choice, old Hickory Jackson, was considerable of a cracksman,

But stubborn as a donkey, if e'er you laid the whacks on: He stood his ground full strong, Was never in the wrong,

And if you ever contradicted, he would lay you soon your backs on : So I never contradicted, let him scold and let him swear, And veto "by th' Eternal!" all the Banks ever were :

But mark me what I say, though justice w Old Hickory's fame shall besobscured by thine. stanch HARRY CLAY!

Well, I own I felt some flat, but I would not flinch for that, So, like a fool, I put my trust in dandy little

Mat: But I found his only aim Was to play a cunning game, To pocket all the pelf he could, and make his followers fat ;

So I let tim have his fill, and not a word I said : And when his term expired I found he 'd gorged himself stone dead. For, mark me what I say, though justice we delay, A fox may double as he will, he can't cheat HARRY CLAY!

Yet once more, thinks I, I 'll try : luck will turn perhaps, by-'nd-by: So I pinned my hopes of happiness on gallant Tip and Ty!

But Fate's unkindly sway Took our brave old Chief away, And Tyler he proved traitor to the friends he 'd risen by: He vetoed every bill they passed, and talked about per se, turned about and wheeled about to the sham democracy: But mark me what I say, though justice we delay, Old Veto soon must walk the plank for noble HARRY CLAY!

And to say this much I 'm bold, let who wil fight or scoid, We'll carry in the man this time we know sterling gold.

Let Matty go it strong,

And Tyler help along, We'll sweep the land for Harry Clay with votes of young and old. Raise to the breeze our banner proud, and shou from shore to shore, "Thy golden days, America, shall now return once more! "

For mark me what I say, though justice we delay, Honor and Truth will triumph yet with glorious

HARRY CLAY!

Arlast, you have OLE BULL in Boston. Would that I could annihilate space, or invent some method to transmit the most delicate of vibrations by an aerial railroad, over two hundred miles o the earth's surface, May no accidents happen in its loss? What delight could supply the place of that rush and whirl of golden melodies, gone mute forever, to mortal cars?

The scientific would remind me that earth need not go into mourning, while Vietx Temrs remained. The musical world are divided into parties, each eager to prove that its idol is greater than the other. Experienced critics pronounce Vietx Temrs so perfect, that not a single deficient cy can be discovered in his performance. I because it, and am thankful for all greatness, and reverence all. But in listening to O.E. Butt, where is the soul that could pause, in its extatic wonder, to discover whether there were deficienties on that." It has, however, always been a favorite theory with me, perhaps a mistaken one, that genius, in its highest manifestations, not only delights the cultivated few, but finds its way to the universal heart. This is remarkably and one or two passers by interfered and knocked and not cover the Shaks.

Tucker down, where he remained for some time. Tucker Courties, via ease of the city is deluged. We were over last evening—and such a scene! But we have no space now for description. The was the is impossible to predict where or when it will cease rising. A few feet more will bring it to the threshold or the warchouses on the landing. It will not rise to rapidly now, however, on this side as before it was over its banks. The most disastrous results are apprehended to attend and succeed this inundance. So the same ferror of the City of the Missouri, we are informed, it falling in at a few feet most will be a succeed the perfection of art; and as John S. Dwight says, "to be that, he must be more than that." It has, however, always been a favorite theory with me, perhaps a mistaken one, that genius, in its highest manifestations, not only delights the cultivated few, but finds its way to the universal heart. This is remarkably and one of two passers by interfered and knocked and one of two passers by interfered and knocked. The courties of the succeeding the color of the mi peare of the violin. There is no incongruity in this comparison. Ole Bull's style is strikingly Shaksperian, with its rapid transitions from mirth to pathos, its stormy grandeur, and its fairy grace. The nature of the instrument increases the similarity, by "its appetizing harshness, its pipes, attached to floating buoys, are placed among the breakers, and through these do the winds hit their warning voices, louder and louder, as the sea rages more and more fiercely. Here is a magnificent storm-organ on which to play, "Wind of the winter night, whence comest thou?"

On this coast has OLE BULL, from childhood, heard the waves rour their mighty bass to the shrill soprano of the winds, and has seen it all subside into sun-flecked, rippling silence. In his music, methinks I hear all that Frederika Bremer says of "The old sca-circled Norroway."—"Is the soul fatigued with the trifles of port, every-day life? Is it depressed by the confined atmosphere of the room? By the dust of books, or the dust of company? Fly, fly toward the still heart of Norway! Listen there to the freeh, mighty throbbing of the heart of Nature.

Bostonians, ye have heard OLE BULBEL. Say. ias not all this passed into his soul, and come out at the ends of his fingers? Has he not transmitted to you the mean of the sea, the flash of the aumra, the werbling of birds, and the gentle maiden's song, to go with you, even into the far eternity? And should you hereafter visit Norway, would not the wondrous secrets of memor puzzle you with the question-"Has my soul been here before me?" Yes, verily, but you knew it not; for the subtlest of all ce-ences is this spiritual magnetism, which pervades our

Even on our physical being do these sensions influences leave their mark. They classify the nations, and are semetimes strongly impressed on individuals. They would always be so, if we were free and true; for our bodies would then become perfect, transparent mediums of the spirit.-Wordsworth thus describes the young maiden, to whom Neiture was 'both law and impulse: . She shall wan her our

This impress has music left on the countenance of Ole Bulbul. His habitual attitudes have a listening expression, which strongly reminds me of Allston's wonderful picture of the Lady Hearing Music, in which the very finger ends seem list

I know not what significance the Nord-men have in the world's spiritual history; but it must be deep. Our much beasted Anglo Saxon blood s but a rivulet from the great Scandinavian sea. The Teutonic language, "with its powerful pri-meval words—keys to the being sef things"—is said by the learned to have come from the East. This language has every where mixed itself with modern thoughts, and forms the tone and muscle of our own. To these Nord-men, with their deep reverence, their strong simplicity, their wild struggle loving will, we owe the invention of the organ, and of Gothic architecture. In these modern times, have they not sent us Swedenborg, that deep in-seeing prophet, as yet imper-fectly understood, either by disciples or opponents; and Frederika Bremer, gliding like the sun-light into the hearts of many nations; and Thorwaldsen, with his serene power and majestic grace; and Roethoven with againstions that lean forth beyond the "flaming bounds of time and space;" and OLE BULL, with the princeval harmonies of creation vibrating through his soul in infinite variations?

Reverence to the Nord-men; for assuredly their erp utterance comes to us from the very heart of things.

This letter is not written from New-York. I cannot help it. It is written from where I am: and that is the memory of Ole Bull's music.

MILITARY FAUX PAS .- Mayor Harper, in comdiance with an invitation from the Union Rolls Company of this city, took his station on the platform in front of the City Hall, about halfpast 2 P. M. yesterday, for the purpose of reviewng the corps. Shortly afterwards the soldiers made their appearance and marched in military order across the Park, but without giving the slightest reason to suppose that they were aware such a person as the Mayor of New York was in existence. It was imagined by certain infatuated individuals that on reaching the western side of he enclosure they would return, salute the Chief Magistrate of the city, and give him an opportunity to return the compliment they had invited him to receive. No such thing. They deployed in out of the Park, and with the calminess and pre-cision of veterans, formed in Broadway, and marched down to the Battery in admirable order. The Mayor waited sometwenty minutes for their return, but finding they did not come back, he adjourned, and the orderly of this highly disciined corps, who had been acting as Mr. Harper's guard of honor, dismissed himself unani-mously and followed his comrades in the path of locy toward Castle Garden. The independence of all imitary rule manifested on this occasion was delightful to behold, evincing as it did how readily the character of the soldier can be sunk in the nonchalance of the private citizen. True Sun.

THE MISSISSIPPI is still rising. The Missouri, nd its tributaries, and, indeed boats or cars; for it OLE BULL should lose its right hand, what could compensate the world for its loss? What delight could supply the place of that rush and whirl of golden melodies, gone mute forever, to mortal cars?
